Gaspard had his medical diagnosis in 2018. This rugby and horror movie fan was suddenly very tired and was complaining about stomach pains. A cardiac ultrasound revealed 3 clots in the left ventricle that were preventing his heart from functioning properly. Gaspard was grafted a mechanical heart, making his daily life very strenuous. However, one thing gave him a lot of respite: his wish to have a computer powerful enough to allow him to edit movies and video games.

"To be able to discuss the ideal configuration of the computer, to do some research on the internet, to ask questions, to dream about everything he could do with this computer ... Those were times when he was not thinking about his problems. Pure joy! ", recalls his mother Valerie.

In the meantime, Gaspard was fortunate enough to receive a new heart, and he continued to think about his dream computer during his hospital stay. Soon after he returned home, the computer finally made its arrival! Gaspard was elated throughout each steps, from the delivery to the configuration and then, being able to use it. "He almost never thinks about his illness or his daily challenges, he is simply a happy kid, with eyes that shine with joy!" said his mother.
